The Down Syndrome Association of Ontario and the Toronto Police Association announce partnership on World Down Syndrome Awareness Day

The organizations jointly agree to actively seek education opportunities and enhance awareness with a goal of improving interactions

March 21, 2018 - Toronto, ON – As part of World Down Syndrome day the Toronto Police Association and the Down Syndrome Association of Ontario are proud to join together in an effort to build awareness and enhance existing relationships between the policing community and the families and friends of persons living with Down syndrome.

There is no question that building a greater understanding of persons with Down syndrome will improve interactions. In order to foster this understanding in the Toronto police community, the TPA is partnering with the DSAO in their pursuit of enhanced education opportunities and awareness. The two organizations look forward to announcing meaningful steps to improve understanding between police and the Down syndrome community in the near future.

The TPA encourages its members to participate by supporting awareness of Ontario Down Syndrome day and following the provincial organization @ondownsyntax @DSAOntario #odsd2018 #wdsd2018.

The DSAO is a charitable, non-profit organization composed of local Down syndrome associations from across the province of Ontario. Together with regional associations throughout Ontario, the DSAO focuses on areas including health care, education and social services.

The Toronto Police Association is the largest single police association of its kind in Canada and one of the most influential police associations in North America. The TPA represents close to 8,000 uniform and civilian members.
